Students raise questions over survey

Reasons for background inquiries to be added to writing-competency tests

By Jennifer Kabbany
Staff Writer

There will soon be a new portion added to the "background-information survey" that is given to students taking San Diego State University's writing-competency tests. This change may be partly because of student concern over the survey.

The new portion, which will be written on the instruction sheet, will be information explaining why the survey is given to students, said Mary Scheidel, a test officer at SDSU.

Scheidel said she had received phone calls in the past from students concerned about the survey.

Previous instructions did not give an explanation for the survey. Scheidel said she hopes this clarification will help make students feel more comfortable about filling out the survey.

The survey asks general questions about the students' backgrounds and histories with the test. However, one question that asked for ethnicity may have alarmed students.

Khaleedah Knight, a biology freshman, said she did not want to fill out the survey when she took the test Jan. 31. She did not see a correlation between the test and her ethnic background.

"I asked the (instructor) if this will affect my grading scale," said Knight, who is African-American. "He said he didn't think so, but that it was part of the test and I needed to fill it out."

Cid White, an international business senior who took the test that same day, said he did not fill out the survey.

"Why did they have to ask if I was black or white? What was the reasoning behind it?" said White, who is half Filipino and half African-American. "There has to be a motive for asking it."

Both Knight and White said they would still have problems with the survey even if the instructions explained why the survey was given.

Knight said she would not care about the reasoning behind asking her race, but she still regrets answering the question.

White said he would be hesitant to fill out the survey, but would in the future if he knew why his ethnic background was needed.

Students are not required to complete the surveys, Scheidel said, but the information obtained from the surveys may benefit the students.

Not only are the surveys designed to gather statistical data, she said, but also to determine whether the essay questions are biased. Scheidel said the university wants to ensure "certain topics are not pre-judging students unfairly."

She gave the example of Mother's Day. She said not every country has a Mother's Day and the surveys help the testing office notice if a word or a sentence in the essay question is unfair or biased to a certain ethnic group.

She said the survey results are sent to some local high schools and community colleges to let the schools know the level of writing their former students have when they attend SDSU.

Local author speaks out on the dangers of breast implants

FOR YOUR HEALTH

By Marva Leigh Smith
Contributor

In a medical interaction class Wednesday, communication students got a graphic education on the controversial topic of silicone breast implants.

"I'm from the days before implants," said Ilana Rosenthal, the author who recently celebrated her 50th birthday. "There was no shortage of 'turn-ons' those days either."

Rosenthal, a psychology graduate from the University of Colorado, has written an informational book titled "Breast Implants: The Myths, the Facts, the Women."

She told the San Diego State University class of about 15 students that there are at least 150,000 serious complications stemming from the cosmetic procedure — which grosses about $500 million annually — despite the fact that breast implants have never been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Rosenthal said she put aside her real estate career 30 months ago to take up a worldwide crusade to inform people about the hazards and risks associated with this presumably safe, voluntary procedure.

She found that many of her friends had already been affected by silicone breast implants, some evidencing serious auto-immune diseases, with lupus- and scleroderma-like symptoms. In auto-immune diseases, the body recognizes itself as a foreign substance and begins to attack itself.

As a result, Rosenthal created the first Internet newsgroup to help support silicone survivors. Today, she communicates daily — across continents — with hundreds of women, their families, health-care providers and other professionals.

Rosenthal, calling herself a "cyber-investigator," spoke of prior studies uncovered in her research that link silicone to harmful health problems.

"It's been known since 1975, that silicone crosses the placenta. How could it not?" she asked, dispelling a common myth cited in a Swedish study about pregnancy and nursing safely with implants.

According to Rosenthal, researchers knew "23 years ago

Students become good neighbors

Community service program to paint, clean elementary school

By Dana Bushee
Staff Writer

It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood, won't you be my neighbor?"

San Diego State University's Good Neighbor Program would make Mr. Rogers proud this weekend.

The community service organization will team up tomorrow to paint and clean the campus of Euclid Elementary School, located in City Heights off of El Cajon Boulevard.

"It's a school that definitely needs a lot of our help," Good Neighbor Program Chairwoman Sherri Pineda said. "I've been told it's not a very good area ... and there's a lot of underprivileged students (who attend)."

Euclid's district counselor Suzanne Coates said the student population includes a large amount of immigrants and has a total of 27 different languages spoken.

"Our area has one of the highest crime rates in the city," she said. "The (Good Neighbor Program) is great for us."

The program began last semester with five members; today it has eight. SDSU freshman Katie Copeland said she became a member of the program last semester because she liked the idea of an organization focused primarily on community service.

"I like the fact that I'm doing something for the betterment of the city," Copeland said. "(The program) is kind of like an internship. It's very educational."

Because of her experience in the program, Copeland said, she may want to work for a non-profit organization after she is graduated.

Last semester, the Good Neighbor Program hosted several community service events to coincide with National Hunger and Homeless Awareness Week. Last month, the program held a volunteer fair on campus in which 28 off-campus organizations offered community service opportunities.

"Even if I end up doing something that has nothing to do with (community service) I'll still be a better person because of the (Good Neighbor Program)," Copeland said.

The two goals of the program are to help students find community service in their areas of interest and to organize community service events.

Students explore teaching possibilities

Forums give information on program's various credentials

By Shannon Hager
Contributor

Students who have no plans after graduation may want to consider special-education or bilingual teaching. On Wednesday, 59 students attended a forum focusing on what is required for those credentials.

The forum was one of several that are offering information on the requirements needed for credentials, which include tests, prerequisites and field experiences. The presentations also inform students of the job possibilities, the duration of each program and the goals of each credential.

Both the special-education and bilingual teaching credentials take one academic year to complete, not including the prerequisite courses needed for admission into the programs.

Gene Valles, a professor in the special-education department, spoke about the program and the credentials offered. He said there is a need for special-education teachers who are bilingual and have diverse ethnic backgrounds. In California, 33 percent of special-education teachers don't hold Level II teaching credentials.

These "emergency" teachers are either employed on a waiver or an emergency credential — this happens when schools desperately need teachers. The credential requirements are then waived and anyone with a bachelor's degree can get an emergency credential.

The special-education department offers several different types of credentials. One prepares students to work in classrooms with students who have mild to moderate disabilities, including learning or emotional problems, and those with mild to moderate retardation.

Another is the moderate to severe credential, which allows for the teaching of students with severe learning or emotional disabilities, or severe retardation.

The third credential is for physical- and health-education specialists, who may work with students who are deaf or blind, have multiple handicaps, traumatic brain injury or orthopedic deficiencies.

These programs are good because they enable credential students to work with many types of children, Valles said.

Don Doorlag, a professor of special education who also gave a presentation, said that having a credential from California is an advantage.

"Students are better prepared and are able to teach in any state," he said. "When some teachers come to California from out-of-state, they may have to take additional classes."

Cristina Alfaro, the coordinator of the bilingual teaching programs and credentials, also gave a presentation on the programs offered.

A credential in Bilingual Cross-Cultural Language and Academic Development, or BCLAD, allows for the teaching of English as a second language. These teachers help students become proficient in both English and their native tongues.

"Not only do you teach in the primary language, which is (mainly) Spanish, but you deal with students with varying levels of language proficiency," Alfaro said. "Many people don't think this can be accomplished, but if you use the right strategies, it can be done."

Alfaro said that by 2000, more than 60 percent of students will be of Latin descent. This brings a need for more bilingual teachers.

"Schools will continue to recruit bilingual teachers," Alfaro said. "The need is out there."

Two more Future Teacher Forums will be held this semester. The first forum, scheduled to be held April 23, will focus on the single-subject credential programs. The second forum, scheduled for May 6, may be held at an elementary school so SDSU students can see things firsthand.

TEACHING: Cristina Alfaro, coordinator of the Bilingual Education program, spoke to about 60 students this week.

Campus Calendar

The Daily Aztec Campus Calendar lists events on and off campus as a service to San Diego State University students, faculty, staff and community.

Clubs, organizations, departments and local community groups may submit written entries to The Daily Aztec City Desk in the basement of the Business Administration and Mathematics building, Room 2. Entries may be faxed to 594-7277, attn: City Desk. Entries also may be e-mailed to dacity@mail.sdsu.edu. Requests will not be taken over the phone.

Entries must contain the full name of the club, organization or group; a brief description of the event or service; time, date, full address of the location; the event fee if applicable; and a telephone number for readers requesting more information.

Submissions are free and are published on a space-available, first-come, first-served basis. The Aztec reserves the right to turn down entries. All submissions are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be rejected.

The deadline for entries is 9 a.m., the Friday before the event is scheduled. The Campus Calendar runs as space provides.

Boos & Bravos

BOO: To Chen Heng-ming, the religious zealot who moved his followers from Taiwan to Garland, Texas, then prophesied that God would appear at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday on a local TV station. Guess what? The almighty didn't show. Their ship probably sailed last year behind the Hale-Bopp comet.

BOO: To the high school in Evans, Ga., that suspended a student for wearing a Pepsi shirt on the school's "Coke Day."

Senior Mike Cameron, 19, was suspended because the administrators said he was showing disrespect for the school's guests — a group of Coke executives who had flown down for the day from Atlanta, 100 miles away.

A spokeswoman for Coke said the execs didn't even see Cameron's T-shirt and were not offended by the prank.

Granted it was only a one-day suspension, but a corporate promotion shouldn't be grounds to hinder a student's education.

BRAVO: To former Padres owner Joan Kroc. Kroc made a $25 million donation to the University of San Diego. We applaud all philanthropic donations to further education, especially when they are in San Diego.

The huge donation will fund an institute for peace and social justice at USD.

Maybe when the new center opens at USD, it and San Diego State University's Fred J. Hansen Institute for World Peace will be able to work together on many projects forwarding the cause of world peace.

BRAVO: To President Clinton. Even though he is mired in scandal, he is still president of the United States and he has a job to do. It's good to see him waving the diplomatic banner in Africa.

BRAVO: To Westside Middle School teacher Shannon Wright, who sacrificed her life to save the life of one little girl during the Jonesboro, Ark., school-yard massacre.

BOO: To the grandparents of the alleged shooter, Andrew Golden, for supposedly leaving the guns unlocked and in the open where the kids were able to find them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student has a dream

In response to the editorial written on the recent ruling of U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfalzer in which she ruled Proposition 187 unconstitutional, the issue is not that the majority is not being ignored, but rather educated.

I am not shocked at all to see this kind of ignorant behavior being displayed in an unnamed editorial.

First of all, be a man or a woman and have your name present so the students of San Diego State can see that racists still exist.

Let me remind everyone out there who thinks that the majority is always right, it was not that long ago in this nation's history that the Chinese were sent to internment camps, the Native Indians were annihilated and Africans were enslaved.

Have we forgotten that as a nation as a whole and as a majority, we passed the "separate but equal" laws stating that as long as equal facilities were provided for people of "color" that they were in actuality, equal and therefore treated as equal.

My fellow students of San Diego State, you know as well as I that humans are at times irrational animals. That is why we have knowledgeable people in higher positions curtailing our need to act as animals.

I believe that it will take more than 1,000 years to undo the wrongs "white America" has done to the "minorities."

If we forget what has taken place in the past then it will take place again.

I believe that the so-called "minorities" in actuality should be called the "majority." We are the ones who built this country; we built the railroads, we planted the seeds, we built the homes. We are the majority.

We minorities have paid our dues tenfold.

Proposition 187 is the racists' view of white America to keep the minorities from getting good education, housing, food or jobs.

Dr. Martin Luther King, I, too, have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal.

I, too, have a dream.

In defense of Bilbray

It disturbs me a great deal when editorials are written that demonstrate writing that is unresearched, uneducated and unfounded.

In the Boos & Bravos of the March 20 issue of The Daily Aztec, there was a "Boo" on Congressman Brian Bilbray stating that he was "using The San Diego Union-Tribune to spread propaganda" and that he is an "obstacle to the environmental groups."

If whoever wrote that article knew anything about politics or government, they would have known to research and ask someone about his voting record, in addition to knowing a basic fact — everyone uses the media.

That is what the media is there for — to write stories of interest to the public, and how politicians think and act is one of those interests.

It is not spreading propaganda, it is letting the public and Bilbray's constituents know where he stands. And where he stands is protecting the environment in which he and his constituents live — and that probably includes you. How is that bad? I don't see you bashing all of the other interest groups and everyone else craving attention from the media for their "woe is me" problems.

Regarding the environment, if you were "on to him," you would know that Bilbray has written and co-sponsored quite a few bills advocating the protection of the environment.

For example he wrote House Resolution 8, which simply calls for vehicles crossing the border to comply with clean air standards.

He also wrote H.R. 630 to basically improve individual state standards regarding emission to reductions.

He co-sponsored H.R. 130, a Clean Air Act, and H.R. 1191, which is the Transported Air Pollution Mitigation Act also regarding clean air and ozone.

And finally, Bilbray also co-sponsored H.R. 131, regarding the congressional stance on ocean protection.

This is not the first time, nor is it the last time The Daily Aztec will write ridiculous editorials. This is just the first time I've actually written about them. However, whether I am a Republican or Democrat is not the issue, whether you are a politically biased paper is. Why don't you investigate the morals of our president, for example?

There is probably more negative evidence against him than there is regarding Bilbray and the environment.

that (silicone) crossed the placenta and the same immunology problems would affect unborn babies."

Rosenthal said silicone was found, at that time, to migrate to distant organs.

"There were no (fetal) studies done that prove their safety. They didn't even look for it," she said.

Describing silicone as an immune-system stimulant, Rosenthal criticized surgeons who still perform the implant procedure known as breast augmentation.

"To do that in 1998," she said, "when it's known it can cross the placenta and hurt the babies, I think it's absolutely criminal."

The class to which Rosenthal spoke is taught by School of Communication professor Patricia Geist and focuses on human interaction in the health-care process.

Geist, an ethnographer, has written extensively about health communication. One assigned reading for her students on Wednesday included a journal article she co-authored.

In the article, the authors reported, "The ethical, social and political problems of our time demand that we challenge medical science as a form of domination under advanced capitalism."

One of Geist's students asked Rosenthal about saline implants and whether it was known if they are safe.

"All implants are cased in a silicone bag that has a porous membrane susceptible to leakage," Rosenthal said.

She then displayed a photograph of what she described as a mold- and fungus-lined saline implant.

"Within 10 years, about 70 to 80 percent of these saline implants will be ruptured, if they don't have them (removed or replaced)," Rosenthal said.

She also expressed concern over the number of women still having this procedure done.

"Two thousand women under the age of 18 got implanted last year. Ninety-five percent of the playmates have implants," she said, referring specifically to Pamela Lee, a Hollywood actress and former pin-up playmate.

Reactions to the presentation from Geist's students were mixed.

One man, who asked to remain anonymous, compared breast implants with the controversial issue of abortion: "If I was in political office, I'd leave that issue alone."

While he said he was "pro-life" on the topic of abortion, he respected his wife's health-care choices regarding implants: "It's her right to choose. I'd have to do more research before I decide."

He said he had thought that silicone breast implants were FDA approved.

A woman in the class said she was surprised that Rosenthal had gone $15,000 in debt to support this cause.

Another woman, whose mother has breast implants, said, "There are two sides to every issue."

Referring to Rosenthal's presentation, she added, "I don't think I took everything to heart."

Another student, Angie Niño, said, "I definitely have more of an educational view on it. Educate yourself. Don't believe everything a doctor tells you."

Rosenthal agreed: "Question everything you hear in medicine. When you hear it on television (or) hear of a study coming out, follow the money. Find out who will benefit by the results that come out."

Rosenthal's newsgroup is located at alt.support.breast-implant.

BASEBALL TONIGHT

A game to remember at the Q

PADRES

7:05, tonight, Qualcomm Stadium

Aztecs take on Padres in an exhibition clash

 By Shawn Jansen
Staff Writer

This is what baseball is all about. A chance to play the best.

That's the opportunity the San Diego State baseball team gets at 7:05 tonight, when it plays the San Diego Padres at Qualcomm Stadium.

It will be a busy day for the Aztecs (13-13, 4-5 Western Athletic Conference) because they have another game scheduled today against Air Force (7-19, 2-7 WAC) at noon. That game is more important to the team's season as far as SDSU head coach Jim Dietz is concerned.

"Our focus has been on the Air Force games," Dietz said. "We've been able to sneak back into a pennant race. With the bad weather, we have to do everything we can to get these games in with Air Force because they're conference games. The Padres and Yankees games are exhibitions, and the stats don't count."

It may not count in the standings, but come nightfall the Aztecs will get the opportunity to play big-league players in a big-league field.

It will be a chance to face possibly the best hitter in baseball, former SDSU star and future hall-of-famer, Tony Gwynn. The Padres, who have the best record of any National League team this spring at 19-9, will be one of the favorites to capture the National League West title.

Also filling out their roster this year is one of the best pitchers in baseball — Kevin Brown, the best defensive third baseman in baseball — Ken Caminiti, and one of the best closers around, Trevor Hoffman.

The Aztecs didn't have much success against the Padres last season. The game was the most one-sided in series history with the Padres winning 16-0. The major-leaguers put on a power display in the first two innings, jumping out to a 13-0 lead after home runs by Gwynn, Rickey Henderson, Wally Joyner and Chris Gomez.

The game will serve as a fundraiser with proceeds going to a fund to help maintain Tony Gwynn Stadium.

"It's very nice for the Padres to do this," Dietz said. "They've really bailed us out financially a couple of times. With the weather that we've had this year, our crowds haven't been big so far this year."

It may be nice for the Padres to help out the Aztecs program, but they've been anything but nice to SDSU on the field. The major-leaguers have won seven of the eight games played between the two teams with the other game ending in a tie.

This season's game won't be any easier.

The Padres are again led by Mr. San Diego, Tony Gwynn. The 11-time All-Star seems to get better with age. He is coming off a season in which he captured his eighth batting title with a .372 batting average, while knocking in 119 RBIs, and 17 home runs.

The Aztecs pitchers will also have the misfortune of pitching against 1996 MVP Ken Caminiti. The only MVP in team history managed to hit .290 with 26 homers, despite playing only 137 games due to injuries.

The Aztecs have been swinging good bats themselves of late.

Third baseman Alex Pelaez has hit safely in 24 of SDSU's 26 games this season. His .387 batting average ranks in the top 10 in the WAC, and he leads the team with 25 RBIs.

Second baseman Kalin Foulds would steal first base if he could. The senior second baseman is batting .389 and is 23 for 25 in stolen-base attempts this year, giving the Aztecs a spark at the bottom of the order.

He would definitely like to test the arm of either Carlos Hernandez or Greg Myers, or whoever the Padres stick behind the plate.

SDSU middle infielder Javier Ramos has been testing the arms of outfielders all season. He's batting .333, and his six triples on the season lead the WAC.

Even with the Padres game sandwiched between an important series with Air Force, it will be a memorable night for most of the players.

"Hopefully this will be a wake-up call for our players," Dietz said. "Maybe they will begin to understand the value of education because 95 percent of them will never have that opportunity to play at that level. But it will be a game they can remember for the rest of their lives."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Aztecs claw their way through a 'Cat-fight'

'LIND'ING A HAND: SDSU's Merete Lindahl helped the Aztecs by teaming up with Jessica Coon for a doubles win against Northwestern.

 By Jose Castro
Staff Writer

In any sport it is hard to concentrate on winning when you know you're playing your archrival next.

The San Diego State women's tennis team plays Western Athletic Conference foe Brigham Young on Saturday, but it first had to test Northwestern yesterday.

The Aztecs passed.

Last night SDSU defeated NU 9-0 on the Aztecs' homecourt.

The Aztecs improved their season record to 9-4 (2-1 WAC) and have won two straight, while the Wildcats fell to 6-8.

Aztecs head coach Peter Mattera said he was really pleased with how his team performed.

"They did a great job as a team," Mattera said. "From top to bottom we were really focused and determined."

One player who was focused and determined was sophomore Lisa Papi. She defeated Northwestern's Leigh Weinraub 4-6, 6-4, 6-2 in the No. 5 singles.

Papi said she had trouble with Weinraub because she's a strong hitter.

"I lost my first match because she was really hard to play," Papi said. "(Weinraub's) a big girl and has really hard volley. I was off-balance, but then I got into my rhythm and started playing better."

Papi also won her doubles match teamed with Maggie Cole to defeat NU's Shannon Duffy and Weinraub 8-6.

Papi said she and Cole were on the same page.

"Maggie and I were communicating really well out there," Papi said. "We were intense and closed the ball off really well."

Other doubles matches included SDSU's Jeanette Bhagandas' and Sarah Donovan's win over Colleen Cheng and Katherine Nasser 8-3. The Aztecs' Jessica Coon and Merete Lindahl also won against Laura Guignon and Jennifer Lutzert.

Coon said the score in her match shouldn't have been that close.

"We were up early," Coon said. "We kind of let them come back on us. After that we decided to put them away."

The Aztecs put away the Wildcats early, sweeping all their singles matches.

Northwestern head coach Lisa Fortman said her team just wasn't as pumped as the Aztecs.

"(SDSU) came out much stronger than us," Fortman said. "Our team was sort of flat, but I have to give credit to San Diego State for coming out and taking care of business."

Bhagandas took care of business against Colleen Cheng at No. 4 singles in straight sets 6-3, 6-3.

Bhagandas was ecstatic with how the team played.

"We were awesome today," Bhagandas said. "As far as singles I was a bit scrappy, but I did what I had to do and won."

Other winners included Cole over Nasser in the No. 1 singles. In the No. 2 spot the Aztecs' Dorota Wozniak defeated Shannon Duffy. And SDSU's Sarah Donovan downed Colleen Cheng in the No. 3 match. Finally, the Aztecs' Whitney Wells beat Laura Guignon in the No. 6 position.

Papi said the Aztecs are pumped about the game against BYU.

"BYU's our biggest rival," Papi said. "Obviously we want to play well and come out with a win."

MEN'S VOLLEYBALL

Aztecs look to calm the Waves

SDSU faces top-ranked Pepperdine

By Tom Kastorff
Staff Writer

If the Aztecs don't watch out, they could get sideswiped by a big kahuna.

The San Diego State men's volleyball team faces the No. 1-ranked Pepperdine Waves tomorrow night in Peterson Gym at 7.

The Waves are ranked No. 1 in both the AVCA coaches poll and Volleyball magazine poll.

They boast a record of 14-3, 11-2 in Mountain Pacific Sports Federation standings, second behind front-runner UCLA.

They had not lost a match since Jan. 29 until they lost consecutive matches this week to Cal State Long Beach, which SDSU beat, and Ohio State. SDSU lost to Ohio State, but it took the Buckeyes a full five games to dispatch the feisty Aztecs.

Pepperdine was stunned by Ohio State on Tuesday, when the fifth-ranked Buckeyes took the Waves in four games. Last week's upset at the hands of seventh-ranked CSULB gives the Waves some problems, dropping them two wins behind league leader UCLA, to whom Pepperdine lost earlier in the season.

Pepperdine is led by junior outside hitter George Roumain, who leads the league and the nation in kill average at 7.65 kills per game. He's also 12th in hitting percentage at .442. Junior setter J.J. Riley is seventh in the nation in assist average with 17.38 assists per game. As a team, the Waves hit .361, which is good for third in the nation.

The Aztecs are coming off a bad hitting match, in which they lost to La Verne. The starters played only one game, getting a rest in a non-conference match. Last Saturday's loss to Ohio State snapped a two-match winning streak for SDSU.

The team should still have some positive momentum heading into tomorrow's match after its recent climb to No. 15 ranking in the polls. The Aztecs don't necessarily need to beat Pepperdine, because they are far ahead in league standings, but they need to gain momentum and a positive outlook for the upcoming weeks.

The playoffs are just over the horizon, and all SDSU has to do is take a deep breath, cough up some confidence and plunge ahead to the postseason.

And then there were four

By Scott Moe
Asst. Sports Editor

With college basketball now down to four teams, the usual surprises and upsets have created a Final Four that not many people would've predicted two weeks ago.

And with Kansas and Arizona, two of the teams favored to cut down the nets back home in San Antonio, the clear-cut favorites this weekend are North Carolina and Kentucky.

But don't count out Utah or Stanford. The two teams from the west haven't received the notoriety of the other two this year, but remember, the Utes and the Cardinal were at one time the only two undefeated teams left in the nation this season.

And in March, it takes only one or two hot players to carry a team to the title. Utah's Andre Miller is a glaring example of that.

Matched up against Arizona's Mike Bibby, a First Team All-American, in the West Regional Final, Miller went off for 18 points, 14 rebounds and 13 assists. It was the first triple-double of the point guard's career, and the spark that led the Utes to a 25-point blowout over the defending champs.

While there's no question who are the most talented of the teams left, all four are similar in the way they play.

They all have talented, big men who can dominate in the paint almost at will. But all four teams live and die with their backcourt and outside shooting.

And the guards have played critical roles in each team's survival in the tournament.

Here's the low-down on what to expect from each team.

North Carolina

Antawn Jamison is the best player in the country. Nobody can dominate a game single-handedly like the junior from Charlotte, N.C. If he stays in school, he'll go down as the best in Atlantic Coast Conference history.

He is complemented by the most dazzling player in the country, Vince Carter. Together, Carter and Jamison have averaged 36.5 points per game in the tournament.

But these two Tar Heels couldn't pave their way to the basket without their guards, Ed Cota and Shammond Williams.

If Reggie Jackson is Mr. October, Williams is becoming Mr. March. He has yet to miss a free throw in 18 attempts in the tournament, and his 21 points per game lead North Carolina.

Makhtar Ndiaye, who averages nearly four fouls a game, plays about as ugly as the spelling of his name. He will be a non-factor, and once again, Williams' shooting and Cota's passing will be needed to keep Carter and Jamison going and UNC winning.

Utah

The question: Can Miller repeat his performance against Arizona?

The answer: With Cota covering him and running up and down the floor all day, don't bet on it.

Utah's big men, Michael Doleac and Hanno Mattola, will need to keep Jamison in check. The problem is the two of them are built like giraffes and run like elephants. They'll have trouble keeping up with Carter and Jamison after 10 minutes.

The two things the Utes have going for them are 1) their ability to slow it up and use their height advantage as a strength down low, and 2) the outside shooting of Drew Hansen. Hansen has shot 45.5 percent from three-point range in the tournament, and if the Utes fall behind, look for them to go to Hansen.

Kentucky

How dominating can Nazr Mohammed be? Just ask UCLA. In the South Regional Semifinal, the Bruins were rejected more times than Bill Clinton at a sorority slumber party.

When all was done, Mohammed had six blocks. His swats of J.R. Henderson's shots early in the game put Henderson in a shell even Houdini couldn't get out of. All this in just 19 minutes.

Along with Mohammed, Scott Padgett makes offense in the paint just a pipe dream for most foes.

But the heart and soul of the Wildcats is Jeff Sheppard. The senior guard's recovery from a foot injury has made him an emotional leader in the tournament.

Ball control and fundamentals are keys for Kentucky, and that's why Wayne Turner and Allen Edwards play such critical roles.

They have the most balance and the most depth of any of the Final Four squads, and those factors alone will always keep Kentucky close in any game they play.

Stanford

The Cardinal probably rely most heavily on their frontcourt of the four teams — with good reason. Seven-foot-1 center Tim Young can play with any big man in the country, when he's not on the bench with foul trouble.

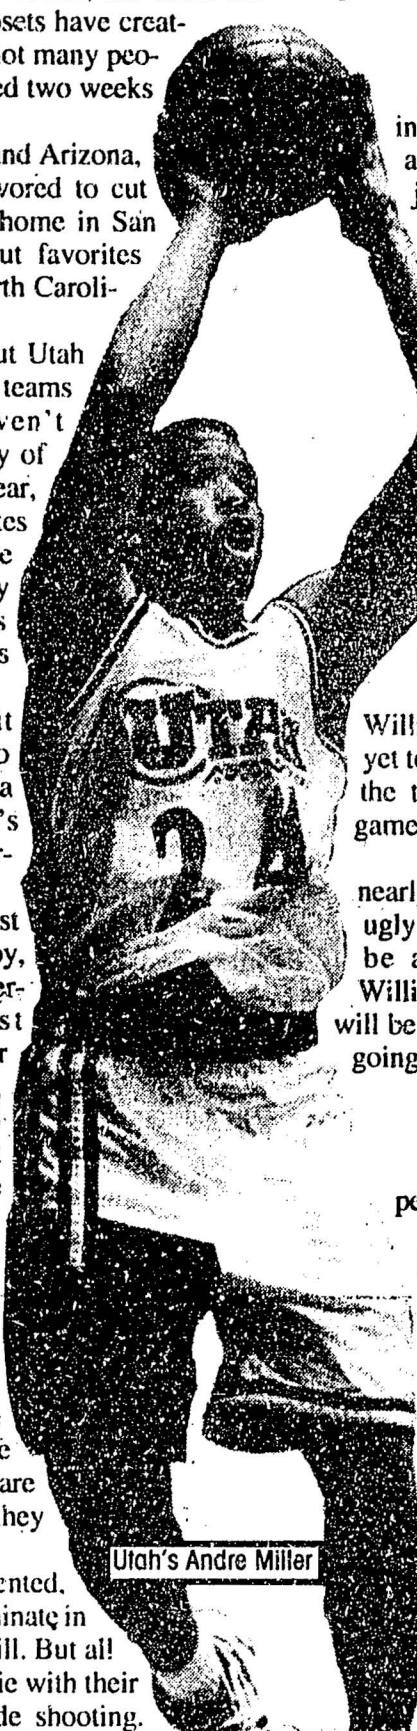

Stanford's problem of keeping Young off the bench and in the game can be tougher than making Purdue's Gene Keady admit he's bald.

And Stanford's backcourt isn't as reliable as Kentucky's or North Carolina's.

But guard Arthur Lee did save Stanford from sure defeat against Rhode Island. His steal and assist to Mark Madsen to steal the game from the Rams was the play of the tournament. And Lee is 26-26 from the charity stripe in the tournament, too.

The one thing the Cardinal guards can do well is shoot long range. Stanford had five players among the top 10 in three-point shooting in the Pac 10 this season.

If Young is ineffective or in foul trouble, Stanford will need that shooting again.

DAILY HOROSCOPE • Friday, March 27, 1998

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Emotionally, you are wired like a time bomb, set to explode. Use this abundance of energy positively. Set sail in the direction of a desired goal or objective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23): Avoid a confrontation. Lay low and give a loved one some much needed space. Seek the counsel of experienced advisers. Only deal with those you can trust.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Given the chance to work on a personal or creative project, take it. Stay out of an argument you can't win. Get some extra rest and recharge your batteries.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21): Duty calls and a tough assignment lands in your lap. You'll be tested to see exactly how much stress you can handle. Reach down deep and rise to the occasion.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 21): The company you keep greatly reflects you. Pick and choose your friends with this in mind. Prepare for a period of introspection and reflection. Make a last-minute decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Get in on the ground floor of a creative endeavor. Money disappears very quickly when you're having fun. Play it safe and stay away from speculative ventures.

CANCER (June 22 - July 22): This is your opportunity to go after the brass ring. Pull from past experiences and utilize all the knowledge at your disposal. Solve a problem with a calm head.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): This is an emotional low cycle for you. Be gentle with yourself. A home improvement project provides a wonderful outlet for pent-up stress. Hammer away!

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Your mind wanders to foreign places. Take the trip you've always dreamed of. Work on building your stamina. Commit to an exercise routine that strengthens.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You'll be in an expansive mood. Investigate the possibilities at your fingertips. Don't be afraid to communicate your feelings to friends. Take a minivacation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): With the help of a partner you can succeed in reaching a financial goal. Resist spending money on impulse. Don't be bashful when it comes to promoting your ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Get set for a fantastic but unusual money cycle. Simplify your finances by consolidating bills. Also, get rid of possessions that only sit and clog your existence.
