Library's savings plan will cost Limited Loan

by Tracy Daly
Daily Aztec staff writer

Love Library officials plan to save $9,000 of a $175,000 budget cut by limiting the number of books an instructor can put on reserve for students in Limited Loan.

Instructors can now reserve 25 books, instead of reserving an unlimited amount, said Library Director Don Bosseau.

The $9,000 savings will come from the elimination of a part-time position in the reserve book room and a reduction in the number of books the remaining staff will have to deal with.

Bosseau said the number of books Limited Loan will be circulating will drop considerably from the more than 10,000 currently circulating.

Because this is the first time the library has put a book reserve restriction on instructors, the effect it will have on teachers and students is unknown. However, Bosseau said he doesn't anticipate any serious problems from the cutback.

"Twenty-five is a fairly high number of books to have on reserve," he said. "I called UCSD, and their average is much less — about 8 to 10 books for an instructor. It really shouldn't be a tough thing to deal with."

Although the cutback is an indirect result of the part-time position elimination, Bosseau said that students may actually find getting material on reserve easier this year than in the past.

"This year students can read the material in the room (Limited Loan) without having to check the article or book out," he said. "Most of the stuff that instructors put on reserve are very short specific articles. It's going to be easier to get those things and the turnover time will be faster."

Figures up from last semester

FTE enrollment short of target; registration deadline extended

by Bradley J. Fikes
Daily Aztec features editor

SDSU full-time equivalent student enrollment is about 500 fewer than the official target of 24,700 for this semester, officials announced yesterday.

However, Admissions and Records Director Nancy Sprotte added that FTE enrollment has increased by about 800 compared with last year's enrollment.

The late registration deadline has also been extended until Friday, Sept. 9, Sprotte said.

Full-time equivalence is determined by dividing the total number of units full- and part-time students are enrolled in by 15.

Although total enrollment is up by 800 from last year, the FTE target was increased by 1,203 from Fall 1982 — leaving SDSU with more ground to make up.

The FTE target is important because the university's budget is based on this estimate. Money must be refunded to the California State University system for an enrollment shortfall. If the target is exceeded, SDSU can ask for funds for the extra students.

However, Sprotte said there is still a good chance

SDSU would meet its enrollment target or come very close to meeting it.

"We still have to receive the figures from late registration," Sprotte said. "We may still reach our goal. But walk-through registration is running ahead of last year, so we may get fewer through late registration."

The late registration deadline was scheduled for tomorrow. Sprotte said the deadline was extended to give more students a chance to register.

"A lot of students apparently still want to register, so we decided to give them some more time," Sprotte said.

Sprotte said 7,000 students participated in walk-through registration, as opposed to 5,700 last year.

"It seems that the fee increase didn't scare them off like we thought it might," Sprotte said.

Officials had speculated that students unable to pay for pre-registration would use walk-through instead, but Sprotte said that it is now impossible to tell if this happened. She added it was difficult to tell whether enough students would register late to meet the FTE target.

"My guess is that we won't quite hit the target on the button, but we'll come a lot closer than first thought. We really have a lot of work ahead of us, that's for sure."

Southwest area examined

Problems of border region are probed in new course

by Lori L. Riggins
Daily Aztec staff writer

Border issues directly affecting the San Diego area are examined in a new course offered by Mexican-American studies.

The course, How the Border Works, is taught by economics professor Norris Clement.

"I'm going to do an overview of the Southwest region. We're going to talk about the history and institutions of the border and how those have changed," Clement said.

"What are the border problems? What are the major issues? And especially the issue of the industrial and commercial development of the Otay Mesa area," he said.

The class objective is not only to inform students of border problems, but also to incorporate a better understanding of the border region.

"I want to see if, with a few basic readings and with bringing in a lot of guest speakers and tying them together, I can integrate the historical, empirical and conceptual knowledge with practical experience to aid them in a working knowledge of the border region," he said.

The program is important to Clement because he has been helping various university offices assemble a border studies program.

"We're interested in what kinds of courses not only do the job in terms of imparting the knowledge, but what kinds of modes of teaching reach the students," Clement said.

Clement emphasized the need for students, especially in this area, to be familiar with the border region.

"One of the things that bothers me about this university is that we're so close to the border, but there's still such little student interest," he said. "Most student interest has to do with going to Hussong's on the weekend and eating lobster at Kilometer 45 or whatever. And there's going to be much more demand for people in the future who are knowledgeable in this field."

The course is part of a certificate program being developed by the Department of Mexican-American Studies. Department Chairman William Vega said the course is being offered even though the overall program is still in the development stages.

"This course is designed to serve the university community by showing the reality of what the border area is like. As soon as we have developed a desirable format, we will petition to have the course added to the catalog," he said.

When instituted, the program will allow students to participate in a specialized study of the border region. Upon completion of about 18 units, a certificate with special emphasis in border studies will be awarded.

ROTC program gains acceptance, more cadets

by Brad Eigen

Student attitudes toward military are changing

Increased student interest and benefits have made SDSU's Reserve Officer Training Corps one of the fastest-growing campus programs.

The SDSU Army ROTC program's enrollment has doubled every year since it was established three years ago. Starting with an enrollment of 15, it now boasts more than 100 cadets.

"In the past, campus ROTC programs have had to fight low enrollment and student disrespect," Military Science instructor Lt. Col. Mike Kaul said.

However, some cadets say the right-wing image of ROTC is unjustified.

"Most people think of the ROTC cadets as radical Republicans who are warmongers," said Cadet Jeff Burbank, a cadet battalion commander. In fact, Burbank said he is a Democrat.

Burbank said SDSU students are tolerant of the ROTC program. He believes this is because Californians are more accepting of ideas.

"My friends call me 'commandant' once in a while, but they're just kidding," he said.

Like many cadets, Burbank was attracted by the program's educational and financial advantages, which have recently been increased.

Besides the added benefits, Kaul said, the ROTC admittance standards have been made more difficult than before. The combined effect has produced motivated cadets.

Burbank originally thought that working and living in a foreign country was appealing but he now has additional reasons for joining.

"I am able to get my education, and at the same time I'll enter the Army as a commissioned officer," he said.

Students are required to be younger than age 25 at the time of their commission and have a grade point average of at least 2.5. Cadets must also pass physical tests and be of high moral character.

"The programs have more to offer the student now than they did in the past, and students are being very discriminating about additional options," Kaul said.

Kaul added that instructors are more selective than before in recruiting cadets. Cadets are now recruited from majors such as engineering and business.

"This is not the same army as 10 or 12 years ago," Kaul said. "We're looking for people with technical backgrounds to operate the machinery of the future."

Kaul said that 75 percent of the Army's commissioned officers come from the nation's 303 ROTC programs.

Almost 100 percent of the Army ROTC students are on some type of financial aid, including the 25 percent of the program that are women, Kaul said.

Cadet Anna Hensley, an SDSU senior, said women are treated as equals in the ROTC with the exception of women fighting on the front lines.

"I liked the idea that women get paid the same as men, and the job market is always promising when I graduate," the civil engineering major said. "The two-year scholarship helped a lot financially."

U.S. Marines will fight back

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan Administration said Wednesday that American Marines on peacekeeping duty in Lebanon will continue to fight back if attacked.

Meeting with reporters, Secretary of State George Shultz also said he does not believe there has been any "concerted effort to single out the Marines and to target them" but that they have been caught up in "generalized violence."

Two Marines were killed and 14 were wounded Monday when their positions near the Beirut airport were attacked by artillery attacks from radical Moslem militiamen.

As for the future, Shultz said, "Let no one doubt, if attacked, the Marines will take care of themselves with vigor."

He also called on Syria, which has a big combat force in the embattled country, and all other parties to support reconciliation efforts of President Amin Gemayel.

Shultz also said the 1,200-man Marine contingent, part of the multinational peacekeeping force, would not be increased.

The secretary said President Reagan is complying with the War Powers Act of 1973 by keeping Congress informed of the Lebanese situation.

At the same time, Shultz declined to say whether the Marines are engaged in combat under terms of the Vietnam-era resolution.

Under the law, if the president notifies Congress that American troops are in combat, he is obliged to withdraw them within 60 to 90 days unless Congress gives its approval.

Vance urges political solution

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said today the Reagan Administration has placed too much emphasis on seeking a military solution to the problems of Central America and recommended it pursue a political settlement instead.

Vance spoke to reporters after testifying in private for more than two hours to the Kissinger Commission on Central America, Former President Gerald R. Ford and former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. were to testify later in the day.

Vance said he believes the turmoil in Central America is attributable more to local conditions than to intervention by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Given the choice between pursuing political and military solutions to Central America's problems, it would be "clearly preferable" for the administration to opt for the former alternative, he said.

Vance's comments were consistent with his past statements on the subject. He has tended to minimize the importance of outside intervention in El Salvador and a cause for the civil war there, emphasizing instead the long history of repression, injustice and poverty, until these problems are resolved, he has said, there will be little prospect of a peaceful evolution.

Lewis returns to host telethon

LAS VEGAS (AP)—After an alert nurse restarted comedian Jerry Lewis' stilled heart last December, a million cards, letters and wires flooded his Las Vegas hospital and Muscular Dystrophy Association headquarters in New York City.

Neatly printed cards told "You're in my prayers." A childish scream implored "Please don't leave me."

This Sunday, a rejuvenated Lewis, looking healthier than ever, returns to host his 18th annual national telethon to fight muscular diseases. Ironically, some of the $300 million he has helped raise for MDA has gone into cardiovascular research—providing knowledge that may have meant the fine line between his life and death at Desert Spring Hospital Dec. 21.

"The biggest muscle we have in our bodies is the heart," Lewis said Tuesday, taking a break in rehearsals for this weekend's show. "I virtually died, and they brought me back to life. The cardiovascular research that came down the past 25 years is the reason I made it. And in that 25 years we (MDA) have been helping fund cardiovascular research."

At this year's telethon, a 21½-hour entertainment extravaganza, organizers expect to announce a possible break in the fight against Lou Gehrig's disease, a muscle disorder that cripples adults.

Prisoners assist in disaster relief

MALIBU (AP)—When entertainer Barbra Streisand's Malibu Colony home was ravaged by storm-churned waves last month, prison inmates quickly surrounded it.

They weren't looting the place, just piling sandbags to protect it and other celebrities' homes from further damage.

And when fires burned thousands of acres throughout southern California this summer, inmates cut the fire lines.

About 2,500 of the state's 37,000 prisoners serve as emergency crews in disasters. While other states use prisoners for community projects, California has the most extensive program using inmates to fight calamities.

Officials seize illegal weapons

AUBURN (AP)—Machine guns and other illegal weapons have been seized in raids on "survivalists" in the Sierra Nevada foothills, officials report.

Placer County District Attorney Jack Shelley said Wednesday about 100 guns were seized and four persons were arrested on charges of possession of illegal weapons.

The raids Monday in Auburn, Foresthill and Roseville followed a two-month undercover investigation by the sheriff's department, the district attorney's office, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and the state Department of Justice, Sheriff Donald Nunes said.

Among those arrested was Daniel Nicholas Joseph, 34, of Roseville, a sheriff's reserve deputy, who first posted $100,000 cash bail. The bail was returned to him Wednesday by Municipal Court Judge Bob Young, who released him on his own recognizance.

Also released without bail were Joye DeBord, 30, and her husband, Curtis DeBord, 29, both of Foresthill.

Also arrested was Malcolm Curtis II, 35, of Auburn, Shelley said he expected him to be released without bail also.

Court documents said the many "survivalists" who buy guns keep them hidden in or near their homes because of the weapons' value, and also to prepare for nuclear or other catastrophes.

Nunes said officers with search warrants seized machine guns, "large-caliber military-type weapons," and numerous parts, conversion kits and instruction booklets for converting semi-automatic weapons to fully-automatic weapons.

The DeBords ran a business in Foresthill called Placer Gun Sales that advertised "sale of firearms by appointment," court documents said.

Curtis was said to be a partner in a business called Survival Resources Unlimited, which was "oriented toward needs of survivalists' groups."

Parents charged in trust violation

STOCKTON (AP)—The parents of a blind, mentally retarded Stockton boy pleaded innocent to pilfering $107,000 from a trust fund set up for the child.

Buddy Joe and Dee Dee Cox were accused of 14 counts each of forgery and grand theft involving a $500,000 fund that was established by court order after they won a medical malpractice suit.

The parents charged that negligence contributed to medical problems during the premature birth of their son, now 5.

But authorities accused the Coxes of altering one trust withdrawal order from San Joaquin County Superior Court in April 1982 and counterfeiting six others.

They were arrested after a $25,000 check designated for surgery on the child was returned to the bank with an endorsement from a Stockton auto dealership, which sold the Coxes a new van and car.

Authorities also said $158,000 from the fund was used to buy a family house in the child's name.

A hearing on motions was set Tuesday for Oct. 11 in Superior Court.

Juvenile halls worry supervisor

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A county supervisor has called for an investigation into allegations that Los Angeles County's juvenile halls have deteriorated into violent criminal breeding grounds because of cost-cutting reorganization.

Supervisor Deane Dana said Tuesday he is concerned that hiring less-educated and less-experienced employees to supervise the youths—a plan estimated to save taxpayers $2 million a year—might be at the root of the troubles.

"This board needs factual information regarding the impact of the juvenile hall reorganization upon the standards of services now being provided," Dana said.

The allegations, which arose in an article published by the Los Angeles Times, included charges that youths found guilty of violent crimes are housed with those only suspected of breaking the law.

Probation officials also reported that homosexual gang rapes and gang violence are constant threats at the three crowded juvenile facilities.

Los Angeles County Chief Administrative Officer Harry L. Hufford, questioned Tuesday about the allegations, said the county will have to be "more creative" in finding solutions to the problems, but quickly conceded, "I don't know how."

Hufford was ordered to report back in two weeks with a possible solution.

Caller threatens son of park boss

FRESNO (AP)—A teen-aged son of the Yosemite National Park superintendent was threatened by telephone as hearings continued for some of the 18 park people indicted on federal drug charges.

An anonymous caller to the home of Superintendent Robert O. Binnewies told the youth Monday, "We're going to get you, we don't like what you're doing." Assistant U.S. Attorney Fabian Henry said Tuesday.

The threatening call was made from El Portal, a community where much of the park staff resides, by a male caller while defendants were appearing for arraignments at U.S. District Court in Fresno, Henry said.

Federal prosecutors had charged earlier that government informants were threatened with reprisals if they continued to help authorities with the drug cases. Indictments contained 48 counts alleging possession or sales of controlled substances.

In court Tuesday, U.S. Magistrate Alan Christensen refused to lower bail for Clay Cunningham, 25, who had two prior drug convictions in Indiana.

A bail hearing was reset Friday for Deborah Diana Rose, 30, was described by prosecutors as "one of the primary dealers" in the park.

Thirteen of the defendants were employed by the park concessionaire, Yosemite Park & Curry Co., but were fired after Sunday's arrests, Christensen said.

Lightning ignites Coalinga blaze

COALINGA (AP)—Lightning ignited a 4,500-acre fire that burned grass and brush on rangeland 12 miles northeast of Coalinga, a Mid-Valley spokesman said today.

No containment time was set for the fire that started Tuesday at 1:44 p.m. in steep, rocky terrain as a series of electrical storms raced through the central San Joaquin valley.

The western sky was a cloudy gray except where smoke rose from the blaze, coloring the horizon red shortly before sunset.

Several hundred firefighters from as far away as Amador and Eldorado counties fought the blaze. Four air tankers reloaded with flame retardant chemicals at the Fresno Air Terminal for trips to the fire until darkness fell.

The blaze burned electrical lines powering a radio repeater facility for public safety agencies, but the facility continued operating with emergency generators.

Girl killed after accident at zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A 4-year-old girl struck by a tree limb while waiting for her family outside the San Diego Zoo has died of injuries sustained in the accident, the county coroner's office said.

The victim, identified as Freida R. Williams of San Diego, died at Mercy Hospital Tuesday.

The girl was injured Monday while she was sitting on a curb near the zoo entrance with her mother, grandmother and sister, the coroner's office said. Witnesses said a limb from a eucalyptus tree fell and struck the girl on the head.

Jet scrapes tail during landing

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A Transamerica Airlines jumbo jet carrying 497 people scraped its tail section while landing at San Diego Lindbergh Field, causing minor damage to the fuselage, aviation officials said.

There were no injuries in the Tuesday incident.

Damage to the plane was "quite minor," said Art Pearsall, manager of the Federal Aviation Administration's Air Carrier District office in San Diego.

A military charter, the Boeing 747, with a crew of 15 was dropping off 482 military personnel in San Diego and was scheduled to take another 400 Marines to the South Pacific, Pearsall said Wednesday.

On landing, the aircraft tipped back and the fuselage near the tail section scraped the runway for a short distance.

Renters' rights provide tenant protection

Editor's note: Thousands of students rent apartments, houses, condominiums and rooms off campus each year. While many have positive rental experiences, some do not. This is the first in a two-part series about how renters can protect themselves. The information was compiled through sources from the San Diego Law Library, the SDSU Housing and Residential Life Office and from The California Tenants Handbook (Moskowitz/Warner, Nolo Press, Berkeley, Calif., 1982) and the California Civil Code.

Compiled by Andrew Kleske
Daily Aztec staff writer

Between 11,000 and 12,000 SDSU students will use off-campus housing this year, possibly without proper knowledge of their rights as tenants. Following are areas tenants should know to protect themselves.

✓ RENTAL AGREEMENTS — Prospective tenants should bargain with the landlord or manager when making out a rental agreement because it documents the tenants' rights in the unit.

The rental agreement should never be made orally. It should be in writing and fully understood by all parties concerned.

Provisions in leases such as "waiver of tenants rights," "waiver of right to legal notice" and "waiver of jury trial or appeal" are not valid and should not be part of the agreement.

A prospective tenant should avoid clauses that allow the landlord unfair privileges such as the right to inspect and entire agreement provisions, which allow the landlord to back out on any promise not in writing.

Provisions that free the landlord of responsibility for damage, make the tenant responsible for repairs or prohibits the tenant from sub-leasing also should be avoided.

Understand all provisions defining notice periods (usually 30 days), payment schedules, responsibilities and rights of tenant and landlord and conditions concerning facilities and property in the unit.

✓ DEPOSITS — The deposit should also be agreed on before the renter signs or pays anything.

A holding deposit is taken when the landlord must hold the unit open until the first rent payment is paid. Be sure the landlord agrees to credit the deposit to the first rent payment under these conditions.

Security and cleaning deposits cannot be non-refundable by law, but a portion of it may be withheld for repairs beyond normal wear of the unit.

To avoid such action, tenants should make a check list, preferably with the landlord present, and determine the condition of the unit before and after moving in.

If the deposit is not returned within two weeks after the tenant moves, the tenant should notify the landlord in writing by certified mail. The tenant can tell the landlord that legal action will be taken to ensure its return. The tenant should retain one copy of the letter. If part or all of the deposit is not returned, the landlord may be liable for $200 in punitive damages.

✓ ROOMMATES — One's roommate is equally responsible for any situation that occurs in the unit. All tenants should sign the rental agreement.

Choosing a proper roommate is important. A legal agreement should be made between roommates concerning rights, privacy and personal property.

The Housing and Residential Life Office provides roommate mediation and counseling in case of a dispute.

✓ RENTING IN A PRIVATE HOUSE — People who rent a room in a private house are entitled to the same privacy rights as single unit tenants. Conditions for rent payment and notice should be agreed on before moving in, as well as privileges and responsibility.

✓ DISCRIMINATION — Discrimination on the basis of race, national origin, religion, marital status, sex, handicap or age is illegal, and the landlord may be faced with paying actual or punitive damages of up to $1,000.

If prospective renters believe they have been discriminated against or if the landlord refuses to show the unit or creates special restrictions, they can complain to the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development or the District Attorney.

✓ SECURITY — Tenants, in most cases, are responsible for their own security. Common sense should be employed here to avoid a loss of property or possible injury. It is a good idea to keep emergency numbers handy, have strong locks on doors and windows, not hide keys in obvious places, etc.

Please see RENTERS on page 7.

Class struggle

In the mad rush to balance state budgets at the expense of college and university students, in the headlong dash to make students pay more and more for an education that is worth less and less, one group of contestants in the rat race is in danger of being disqualified: the poor.

To continue to raise the costs of public higher education, without making efforts that would ensure the poor access to that education, constitutes class discrimination. And, because a disproportionate number of women and racial minorities live in poverty, the discrimination becomes, by effect if not by intent, sex and race discrimination. The moral implication is clear. No one desiring an education should be denied it because of a lack of money.

In addition to the need for more money to finance the education of less fortunate Americans, there is a need to restructure the financial aid qualification process.

For instance, the criteria now used to determine if students are dependent or independent of their parents seem both arbitrary and unfair. Under the current system students who receive no support from their middle-class or wealthy families are forced to delay their education until they establish their independence and genuine need.

Heroes can be found on the financial-aid front of the budgetary battle. Associated Students provides an invaluable service to SDSU students through the emergency loan program. Students can borrow up to $200 without interest and take the entire semester to repay. Further, these loans are provided in an unlimited number so that no needy student is denied. These emergency loans are especially important now that students are being stunned, semester after semester, by last-minute fee increases.

The Duke's veto gives education the blues

by Stephen J. Curran

Students at California's public colleges and universities are suffering from the wrath of the blue pencil.

Gov. George Deukmejian has seen fit to use his power of selective veto, known as a blue-pencil veto, to unmercifully slash the California State University, University of California and California Community College budgets.

Because the cuts were made on July 21, 21 days past the budget deadline, students were once again treated to a fee increase just as they are preparing for classes, and after at least 80 percent of SDSU students had already paid $227 in registration fees.

If it's any consolation, SDSU President Thomas B. Day thought it too near the beginning of the semester to cut any class sections, according to University News Service Manager Rick Moore.

But, Moore said, Spring Semester classes may be a different case entirely.

And although classes have been given a temporary stay of execution, what havoc has the blue pencil wrought at SDSU?

Duke's budget bloodletting via blue pencil will be felt most by those SDSU and CSU academic areas that rely on large amounts of equipment.

Science, engineering and computer courses, as well as courses in professional studies, are unable to buy new equipment, some of which is sorely needed by some of the science and engineering departments. Many of these departments won't even have the money to make needed repairs.

The budget cuts are forcing the postponement of a renovation of buildings near Hardy Tower — renovations that the Graduate School of Public Health needs to attain accreditation.

They are forcing the layoff of some library personnel, and the library may be unable to replenish lost or damaged material or purchase new material.

This round of budget cuts and any future cuts that Deukmejian may make could have disastrous results.

If Duke lops off more of the CSU budget, Day may decide to fire instructors and severely cut classes in the spring. These and any other future cuts could mean that Day will face increasing criticism, criticism as harsh as that he received early in the year when he dissected SDSU's student health service to protect classes and academic programs.

Deukmejian's wild wielding of the blue pencil highlights his hypocrisy. Duke's duplicity begins with his "concern" for education — a concern, as noted in the Los Angeles Times, that stops at 12th grade.

The governor's cuts in higher education hurt more than the University of California and CSU systems; they may nearly cripple California's community college system. The $50 fee for junior college students and the cuts in the system are ending opportunity for many of California's poor.

Part-time students, single parents, working men and women, people in need of vocational skills and people who simply desire a decent education or the opportunity to learn — these are the sort of people who have taken advantage of California's community college program, which once was an institution of higher learning open to all California's citizens.

While the governor forces fees ever higher, he has yet to propose any means of raising the necessary funds for college instructors and classes.

The solution from the governor's office is simple. Wave the blue pencil, force students to pay higher fees that don't go directly to academically related expenses, and voila — no problem!

And this solution may be used further in the coming years.

For Deukmejian, still a new governor, is like a child who has opened his first box of crayons, taking a blue marker and marking everything in sight, unaware of the consequences.

The damage done by Deukmejian is not damage that can easily be scrubbed away. Deukmejian has ruined the dreams of many and may well ruin the world's finest public system of higher education with a few strokes of his pencil.

Ruined with ugly streaks of blue.

New students' initial CONTACT designed to aid college careers

by Chris Stokes

A chance to get the most out of education through new seminars is provided to new students by the CONTACT orientation program.

The "Planning for Excellence" seminars informed students of what instructors expect and how to succeed in college.

Featuring two panels, the two-day program gave instructors an opportunity to discuss what they expect of students and what skills should be developed. Also, students were told about testing procedures and given numerous tips on preparing for active and productive college years.

Civil engineering Professor Fang-Hui Cho said students in the sciences should be well prepared in the basics and should not miss labs.

"You should be in study groups to help with overlooked problems and reinforce your own knowledge by explaining them to your partners," Cho said.

Stressing that students don't have to spend all their time studying, Cho said to balance study and recreation.

"Plan your time to have lots of fun and lots of study," he said.

The second panel consisted of successful students describing what they did to become accomplished learners. Gloria Andren is a 33-year-old re-entry student with two children. She urged students to be consistent in study habits. Andren keeps records of how many hours she has studied during each preceding week and makes up pre-tests on cassette.

"The reason I have a good grade average is because I work for it," Andren said.

Following the student panel, the students reassembled in small groups for individual discussions with their CONTACT group leaders.

Faculty representatives offered suggestions ranging from attending class regularly and knowing drop deadlines, to tips on study skills and the usefulness of visiting instructors during their office hours for help.

Most students "only show up during office hours during the last weeks; then it's too late," classics Professor Steven Schaber said. He told students to come in early in the semester because in some cases they can get personal tutoring.

The student representatives explained their study habits and advised the new people to have study partners, use tape recorders in class and review lecture notes immediately following lectures.

Psychology student Paula Kern urged studying with a partner. "I now have a study partner in every class," she said. Kern pointed out that to avoid cramming she studies "everything the same day of class."

The value of some common sense study habits such as reading assigned material before lectures and then reviewing immediately afterward for best retention was stressed by Professor Steven Schaber.

Schaber said that the key to success is to develop adequate language and notetaking skills.

Griffin named dean at Human Services

by Joe Shoulak

After years of Army medical service in Europe, Asia and Alaska, as well as dean of the SDSU Graduate School of Public Health, Dr. Herschel E. Griffin is the new Human Services associate dean.

Griffin, 65, received his bachelor's degree from Stanford in 1939 and his master's degree from the University of California medical school at San Francisco in 1943. Since then, Griffin has devoted his medical career to helping solve and study health problems from coast to coast and throughout the world.

On three occasions, from 1945 to 1952, Griffin served in the Army as surgeon and medical officer. His continued training and professional positions in the Army gave him the opportunity to work among people with special health problems in Alaska, Europe and Asia. Before his 1969 Army retirement, Griffin was chief of the Preventative Medical Division in the Army's office of Surgeon General.

Following his military retirement, Griffin entered the field of education. For 11 years he was dean of the Graduate School of Public Health and professor of epidemiology at the University of Pittsburgh.

In 1980, Griffin left Pittsburgh to help develop the SDSU Graduate School of Public Health. He served three years as associate director.

This year Griffin was hired as the associate dean of the College of Human Services. He will continue to be involved with the Public Health school and other colleges in the department.

Griffin describes his responsibilities as associate dean as "whatever the dean wants me to do."

"The dean's job is too much work for one person, so he has to divide up his responsibilities. Mostly what I do is monitor academic programs and the budget to support them. I also look for opportunities to improve our organization and resources."

Besides his work as associate dean, Griffin believes that it is important that he become involved in health activities in the community. He spends one day a week at the San Diego County Health Department as consultant and epidemiologist.

Dean Peter Dual said he looks forward to working with Griffin because of his "diverse professional background."

Dual said that he is impressed with Griffin's sensitivity to the needs of the community as well as his administrative experience.

Dual said Griffin is very active in the Faculty Senate and shows leadership in the College of Human Services.

Dual also agreed with Griffin that relationships among schools and departments at SDSU are essential. He said that he agreed with Griffin's statement that the mission of the College of Human Services is to "prepare professionals to go to work here...and convert theory into practice."

Griffin describes employment possibilities for people currently entering health fields as a "moving target."

"It depends on the individual program. For example, in nursing there is increasing demand for people who are trained at the graduate level in fields such as community health nursing, acute care nursing and administrative health nursing," Griffin said.

"The writing of essays is the medium of communication" in college, he said.

When one student asked if "pop," or surprise, quizzes were common, the audience seemed relieved when the instructors answered, "No."

Laurel Corona, CONTACT coordinator, said she was not surprised at the high number of students who attended. "There are more students interested in doing well than most people believe," she said.

Along with signing on the dotted line for a cost-defrayed education, the ROTC cadets also agree to go to war if ordered.

"Of course, the fear is always there," said Hensley. "But I knew what I was getting into when I signed."

Cadet Burbank said, "I don't like the idea of graduating and being dead the next year. None of us want to go to war, but we took it into consideration. Hopefully, things will be able to be straightened out before a war happens."

The campus ROTC at SDSU has a cross-enrollment with UCSD and USD, along with many of the local junior colleges.

A cadet's life is not confined to on-campus activities. Each cadet is required to complete six weeks in an advanced camp.

Jeff Burbank

Advanced camps put men and women in war games to test for leadership, teamwork, oral communication, influence, initiative and sensitivity to people.

Cadets are oriented to the infantry and are left to take charge and to delegate command. Weapons training is also a part of the camp.

Cadets have the choice of three advanced camps: Airborne School, Air Assault School or Cadet Troop Leadership Training.

After going through the program and the punishment of the camp, Burbank insists, "It gains people's respect."

Renters

A landlord's insurance will not cover tenants, unless stipulated in the rental agreement. Inexpensive insurance policies are available for tenants.

The right to privacy is a basic right and is protected by the Civil Code. It states that the landlord may enter a rented unit only in the case of an emergency, to make needed repairs or to show the unit to prospective buyers (during normal business hours), when the unit has been abandoned or vacated or with a court order.

The landlord cannot force tenants to waive this right, and a tenant can deny entrance to the unit under inconvenient circumstances.

If tenants can prove a repeated pattern of trespassing or that the landlord damaged or removed anything from the unit, they should seek legal advice.

The Housing and Residential Life Office, 6050 Montezuma Road, has more information and pamphlets on tenants' rights and has referrals for other sources and services.

LaPlante's move is surprise to harriers

by Karen daSilva
Daily Aztec sportswriter

Today marks the beginning of a new era for women's track and cross country Coach Fred LaPlante, who moves over to USC to assume the duties he held at SDSU.

In his wake, LaPlante, who coached at SDSU for four years, leaves behind a wave of surprised reaction to his sudden departure.

Rumors and hints of LaPlante's departure, which was announced Tuesday, had been circulating since last year's track season, but nothing was taken seriously.

Jim Cerveny

SDSU track and cross country member Stacy Kneeshaw said she had heard teammates talking about LaPlante leaving last spring. But she said everything was said in such a light tone, she thought they were just discussing their opinions.

"It never even entered my mind," she said of LaPlante's resignation. "I was surprised."

It was known, however, that LaPlante had applied for the USC position early in the summer. But less than a month remained before the season's first cross country meet, the UCLA Invitational on September 18, and USC had still not reached a decision. It was generally thought La-

Plante would be at SDSU for at least the upcoming year.

Women's track and cross country member Lisa Gross said the team learned of LaPlante's plans on Monday.

"I have only one thing to say about that," Gross said of the team's reaction to LaPlante's departure. "We were all pretty much surprised and confused."

The confusion, Gross said, arose from not knowing immediately who would be replacing LaPlante. She said the team was concerned with how the new coach would plan the season.

However, a half-hour after learning that LaPlante was leaving, the team was informed that Jim Cerveny, an assistant with the SDSU men's track and cross country team, would be taking over.

"Yesterday, (SDSU Athletic Director) Mary Alice Hill knocked on my door, came in, and said, 'Congratulations, you've got the job,'" Cerveny said Tuesday.

When Cerveny first heard that the job of women's cross country and track coach might be open, he approached both LaPlante and men's coach Dixon Farmer and asked to be considered for the position. LaPlante and Farmer then went to talk to Hill on Cerveny's behalf.

Cerveny will be an interim coach throughout the 1984 track season. The position for women's track and cross country coach will then be open for the following season.

Kneeshaw said it is still too early to tell what effect Cerveny will have on the team.

"I have mixed reactions," Kneeshaw said. "I'm the type of person who likes change. So having a new coach would be kind of refreshing."

"There's less pressure with being able to make an impression and kind of make a fresh start. But that was before I knew Jim was the coach."

WAC ponies head for gate as post time looms ahead

Good afternoon everybody, and welcome to the place where the turf meets the surf and the Rocky Mountains meet the sky, for this semester's feature race — the 22nd running of the WAC Handicap.

Nine teams will go to the post in a 12-week race for the WAC Championship and a trip to the Holiday Bowl this December in San Diego.

Presenting now, in alphabetical order, the combatants in this year's run for the Holiday:

The Air Force Falcons, with Coach Ken Hatfield aboard. Last year, Air Force won eight of its 13 encounters and knocked off defending champion

The New Mexico Lobos, with Coach Joe Morrison in the irons. The Lobos, dressed in red and silver, threatened to end BYU's domination of this event last year, but a steward's inquiry imposed by BYU kept New Mexico from running a perfect race, causing them to finish second. Many prognosticators still believe that the Lobos should have received a bid to run in the Hall of Fame or Aloha handicaps last year.

The SDSU Aztecs, with jockey Doug Scovil aboard for the third time. The Aztecs, who will wear the red and black silks, finished with a rush in last year's event but saved too much ground early on the race and

Chris Hill

BYU in a match race. They will be decked out in blue and white, with funny little lightning bolts on the side of their jockeys' caps.

The Brigham Young Cougars, with Coach LaVell Edwards aboard. The Cougars will enjoy the services of the meet's leading quarterback, Steve Young, and will be shooting for their sixth-straight WAC Handicap victory. Prior to those six victories, BYU finished in a dead heat twice and claimed a share of this prestigious championship. They will also be decked out in blue and white, with a blue Y on their jockeys' hats.

The Colorado State Rams, ridden by Coach Leon Fuller. The Rams will wear navy blue and gold, while their jockeys will sport ram horns on the sides of their hats. Last year, the Rams ran seventh in the race after pulling up and finishing dead last the year before.

The Hawaii Rainbows, with Coach Dick Tomey up. The 'Bows will sport the green and red silks and are coming off of a fifth-place finish in last year's race. Hawaii, which trains in the Island stables, will be competing in the WAC Handicap for only the fifth time.

were photo'd out of the third-place money by Air Force. SDSU has never had any success in match races against BYU and figures to need some improvement in that area if they want to challenge.

The UTEP Miners, with Coach Bill Yung aboard. The Miners, decked out in orange and white, have never been a factor in the WAC Handicap before and may need a drop in class before they can expect to challenge.

The Utah Utes, ridden by Coach Chuck Stobart. The Utes, dressed in the red and white silks, had many close calls in last year's race and, after a rough ride, stumbled to a sixth-place finish.

The Wyoming Cowboys, with Coach Al Kincaid in the irons. The Cowboys will sport the brown and gold silks and figure to improve over last year's eighth-place finish.

And now, for a look at how this year's WAC Handicap race shapes up, let's go to our track handicapper, Ivan Gottoknowitall, who will list his choices, complete with last year's record, team, coach, last year's finish, a comment and odds:

Aztec squad hurt by injuries

SDSU soccer season opener to test young Aztecs, Tritons

by Mark Kragen
Daily Aztec sportswriter

The SDSU-UCSD soccer game at Aztec Bowl, today at 7 p.m., will be a battle of youthful energy.

The Aztecs, with only six returning players, will start six freshmen. Meanwhile, the UCSD Tritons have only two seniors on their squad.

SDSU defeated UCSD last year, 4-1, and holds a 15-1 lead in the series between the two squads.

Triton assistant coach Bill Bullock is apprehensive about opening up against SDSU.

"It's probably not the best thing to be doing," he said, considering the series record between the two teams.

Even though SDSU has a young team this season, Bullock said it will still be as tough as usual.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's just the same," he said.

According to Bullock, senior Barry Thompson is the player to watch on this year's Triton squad. Other than Thompson, most of the UCSD players are young and untested.

For the Aztecs, four of the six returnees will miss tonight's game because of injuries.

Tonight's game against UCSD will be a testing ground for the young Aztecs.

"It would be a testing ground anyway, even if it was against the No. 1 team," SDSU Coach Chuck Clegg said. "With so many untested players, you have to give them a chance."

Goalies John Garretson and Daryl Pater will get their first test tonight. Garretson is a freshman redshirt, while Pater is a sophomore redshirt who transferred from Cal State Northridge.

After tonight's game, Clegg will have a good idea as to which 18 players will make the team's traveling squad. 20 players will be suited up for tonight's game.

On Friday, the Aztecs leave for Fresno to play in the Fresno State Gold Rush Tournament.

"There's some pretty tough teams," Clegg said of the tournament's lineup.

Last year's Division II champion, Florida International, will be there, as will NCAA playoff teams Washington and Fresno State.

The Aztecs were 1-1 last year against Fresno State. Each team tallied 1-0 victories, but the Aztecs' win was in the NCAA playoffs.

Florida International, besides winning the Division II championship, also knocked off last year's NCAA champion, Indiana, 5-1.

After the Gold Rush Tournament, the Aztecs visit Biola College on Sept. 14 and Westmont on Sept. 17. SDSU returns home Sept. 23 to face UCLA in the first SCISA league game.

SOCCER STORIES—The four returnees missing tonight's game are sophomore Steve Snyder (broken foot), sophomore Garth Kupritz (broken nose), senior Jeff Kepper (thigh) and senior Sheldon Cohen (strained ankle and bruised heel)....Junior Renato Capobianco will play tonight, but assistant coach Mitch Murray said he is not at full strength.

HERE'S THE KICK — Aztec soccer player Stephen Blackbourne gets his leg up to kick one in practice. SDSU, which finished 19-4 last year, opens its 1983 campaign tonight at 7 in Aztec Bowl against UCSD.
